Both the Falcons and Washington come into Sunday with a 1-2 record. Each team notching their first win of the season with game winning field goals over the New York Giants. The Falcons and Washington have had trouble thus far keeping their opponents from scoring ranking 30th and 29th respectively in the league in points allowed. Though the Falcons defense seems to be on the up and up after allowing the Giants only 14 points last week and holding Saquon Barkley to 51-yards. The Falcons can look to take advantage of an underperforming Washington defense that was supposed to rank near the top this season. The Falcons have faced Washington 26 times with an overall record of 10-15-1, regular season and playoffs. However, you would have to look back almost 20-years in the history books to find the last Washington win in this series. The Falcons have won the last six match ups, including every game that Matt Ryan has laced up. With all of that to digest there is no shortage of ways to take in Falcons vs Washington game this Sunday. HOW TO WATCH What: Atlanta Falcons (1-2) vs. Washington Football Team (1-2) When: Sunday at 1:00 p.m. ET FOX is broadcasting Sunday's NFL game between the Washington Football Team and Atlanta Falcons in Week 4. We break down the schedule and how to watch the game via live stream. FOX will be broadcasting Sunday's NFL game between the Washington Football Team and Atlanta Falcons. The game will start at 1 p.m. ET at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta, Georgia. Washington got the wrath of Josh Allen and the Buffalo Bills in Week 3, losing 43-21 in a bloodbath. Both sides of the ball got exposed, with QB Taylor Heinicke throwing 2 INTs and for just 212 yards. Had it not been for Antonio Gibson's long 73-yard TD scamper, this game would have been even more out of hand. The Falcons picked up their first win of the season, a 17-14 victory on the road against the New York Giants. It still wasn't the offensive performance the Falcons were looking for, though the defense held tight (granted it was against a depleted Giants offense). Atlanta may have a tough time

Atlanta should still be feeling good after a win, while Washington will be looking to get back in the win column. Washington found themselves the reluctant recipients of an unfortunate 43-21 punch to the gut against the Buffalo Bills last week. Washington was down 36-14 at the end of the third quarter, which was just too much to recover from. No one had a standout game offensively for Washington, but they got scores from TE Logan Thomas and RB Antonio Gibson. QB Taylor Heinicke ended up with a passer rating of 143.40. Meanwhile, it was a close one, but last week the Falcons sidestepped the New York Giants for a 17-14 victory. Like Washington, Atlanta didn't have any clear offensive standouts, but they got scores from CB Isaiah Oliver, TE Lee Smith, and WR Olamide Zaccheaus. QB Matt Ryan ended up with a passer rating of 150. This next game is expected to be close, with Washington going off at just a 1.5-point favorite. But bettors beware: they are 0-2 against the spread when favored. Washington and Atlanta now sit at an identical 1-2. A pair of defensive numbers to keep in mind before kickoff: Washington is stumbling into the contest with the second most yards allowed per game in the league, having given up 432 on average. Atlanta has experienced some struggles of their own as they are third worst in the NFL in touchdowns allowed, with ten on the season. It's possible one of these Achilles' heels will wind up tripping the losing team up.
